

From headmaster Mr Harry Fincham

AS SO many other great schools have shown, growing old does not indicate the onset of decay. Indeed, age and tradition are the great roots which nourish and strengthen a school. So it is with Milton.

We are proud of our heritage and traditions but they are of value only insofar as they give us deep access to the future. It is the future that is important.

Change and growth and adaptation can take place successfully only when the underlying structures are strong. We need to change and grow and adapt, as any worthwhile educational system must.

Milton gives its thanks to all those who have so loyally supported it in the past and who still support it — parents, Old Miltonians, friends. We ask you all to come with us into the future of our country, vigorously and enthusiastically.
